The reports of W. L. Bodine, superintendent of compulsory education, and of D. P. Macmillan, director of the Department of Child-Study and Pedagogic Investigation, upon the conditions in Chicago schools, have called out wide notice so far as the general conclusions are concerned. Five thousand children habitually hungry and ten thousand more who do not have sufficient nourishing food, as estimated by Superintendent Bodine, is certainly distressing enough to compel attention. Dr. Macmillan s report brings out the close connection of malnutrition with retardation. Of 10,090 children observed in 12 schools, 1,178 were...
