New Orleans and was thus able to give information to Sykess mother in New Orleans regarding her son, she up to that time having had no word as to his whereabouts or condition. He subsequently recovered. About this time General Gregg received word that Lees army had entirely recrossed the Potomac, so it was too late to accomplish anything with two brigades. He also found that they were moving around to surround us, as several couriers were captured on the way from Harpers Ferry, the main roads leading there then being occupied by the enemy. General Gregg, as usual under such conditions, made a splendid fight, the enemy making repeated efforts to drive us, but were every time repulsed by Irwin Greggs brigade and the fire of our battery. They kept up their attacks until dark. That night the wounded who could be moved were started back for Harpers Ferry by a road close to the rivers edge, the only one not occupied by the enemy, the General and his staff leaving some time after midnight, and our rearguard about daylight. Within due time we reached Harpers Ferry with no losses other than the killed and those so badly wounded that we were unable to move them. These were left in a church with a surgeon and the ladies of Shepherdstown, who were zealous in their efforts to assist in alleviating the suffering of our men. During August and September, the division was kept...
